Recent severe weather has caused destruction in many communities across Missouri. Victims of severe weather often are left with compromised water systems, homes and buildings needing tremendous repairs and vegetation and other debris needing proper disposal.

The Missouri Department of Natural Resources' central offices in Jefferson City and regional and satellite offices throughout the state are working in these communities to ensure that residents are safe and have the information necessary to begin cleanup. Communities, businesses and homeowners will find several fact sheets and resources providing information for cleanup located on the department's Web site at www.dnr.mo.gov/disaster.htm. These fact sheets include information on debris disposal, proper handling of hazardous materials and household hazardous waste, safety of drinking water in affected areas and tips for repairing historic properties that have been damaged by natural disasters. Fact sheets also are available by calling the department toll-free at 1-800-361-4827.
